

Healthx Product - Communication System

Getting Healthcare and Benefit Information to Your Employees, Hasn't Always Been Easy or Effective.

The bottom line of communication is the idea of seeking engagement to achieve an end result. Until we started competing with the world of bits and bytes and social media, it was relatively easy to project expected results. As an employer today, however, it requires a more strategic logic to break through all the "noise" that inundates employees.

Employees recognize that their employer serves as their livelihood. They understand that communication with their employer is critical as they aspire to grow within the organization. Whether it's about the communication of benefits, open enrollment, wellness initiatives, or new, available positions, employees anticipate and welcome communication from their employer.

So why compete? Realizing how important company information is to employees, Healthx has the ability to integrate a multi-modal communication system that allows them to decide how they prefer to receive communication from their employer, including SMS text messaging, email, automated voice messaging, fax, and print. Each mode is supported through seamless integration with the Healthx system.

Employees are more likely to become engaged if they have the ability to receive information via their preferred communication channel. Understanding this, the Healthx multi-modal Communication System (CommSys) allows information of choice to be delivered with the touch of a button, and received in the modes favored by each employee.

Integration of the CommSys into a Healthx HR Communication Portal, or an existing intranet, results in more effective and efficient communication, resulting in greater employee engagement and results that HR expects.
